Niklaus von Flüe and Dorothee Wyss

Niklaus von Flüe (1417–1487) is one of the most influential leading figures in Switzerland. He is an example in mysticism and spirituality, society and politics, as well as a man with strengths and weaknesses.

Supported by his wife, he assumed responsibility at work and in public as well as in family and society. At the age of 50 he left everything that was dear to him and from then on lived as the hermit “Bruder Klaus” in the Ranft, immersed in prayer in the constant search for God. He became a much sought-after advisor and mediator. His contemporaries saw in him a “living saint”. This respect and veneration survived the centuries and experienced a new upswing after the canonization in 1947.

Brother Klaus is an irritating saint. His leaving of the family and his fasting for 20 years are very difficult to understand. The importance of his wife is undisputed. She was his confidante and companion. Without her consent, his path of life would not have been possible. Understanding the mutual struggle of Niklaus and Dorothee is essential to find access to Brother Klaus von Flüe.

Unique sacral space

Within a radius of only a few kilometres there are Brother Klaus’ birthplace, places where he lived and worked, the Ranft, where he lived as a hermit for 20 years, and his grave in the parish and pilgrimage church of Sachseln. Unique: Proximity and authenticity.

Welcome to the sacred pilgrimage area of Sachseln, Flüeli and Ranft.

The village of Flüeli (Flüeli-Ranft)

The village of Flüeli is situated on a plateau, bordered by the ravine of the Melchaa and a tree-covered rock, 4 km above Sachseln.

The family name von Flüe and the name of the village, Flüeli, are traced to this rock. This is where Niklaus von Flüe was born, this is where he lived with Dorothee Wyss and their children.

1 Flüeli Chapel of Karl Borromäus

The emblem of the village of Flüeli is the Flüeli Chapel which stands on the rock (Fluo) and was consecrated to St. Charles Borromeo in 1618. This artistic monument of national importance contains magnificent marquetry and a richly painted wooden ceiling. The Flüeli Chapel is popular as a wedding chapel.

2 Festive square with the Blessing Brother Klaus

At the foot of the Flüeli rock is the festive square designed by Albert Wider in 1947 for the canonisation of Brother Klaus, with the mighty bronze figure of the "Blessing Brother Klaus". Open air festive and pilgrim services take place here.

3 Village square and time capsule

In 2017 the village square was redesigned. Embedded in the ground, under a glass cover, is the copper time capsule of the commemorative year 2017 "600 years of Niklaus von Flüe". The capsule contains 2602 messages written for posterity by people from all over Switzerland. It is to be opened in 2117, on the 700th anniversary of the birth of Niklaus von Flüe.

4 Birthplace of Niklaus von Flüe

The house where he was born stands on the von Flüe family estate. Niklaus was born here and he lived here until his marriage with Dorothee Wyss. The house was inherited by the direct male line until 1650 and is now owned by the chapel foundation established by Brother Klaus. The current appearance dates to the restoration of 1925 and recalls the late medieval culture and style of living.

5 The Residential House of Niklaus and Dorothee

Niklaus built the house in the Schiblochmatte around 1445/46, when he founded his own household. He lived here for 20 years with his wife Dorothee Wyss and their ten children until he went on pilgrimage on October 16, 1467, and settled down as a hermit in the Ranft shortly afterwards. Dorothee and the family continued to live in this house not far from the Ranft. In 1946, on the occasion of the canonization, the house was reconstructed and corresponds in its present form to its original state.

The Birthplace, the Residential House as well as all the chapels are open to public.

6 Ranft

The toponym “Ranft” stands for “Rand” which means edge, margin and describes the place where the escarpment slides towards the ravine formed by the Melchaa River. The Ranft is just as authentic as it was in the time of Niklaus von Flüe. A place of silence and peace – inseparably connected to Brother Klaus.

7 The Upper Ranft Chapel

Four rays of light showed Niklaus von Flüe the way to the Ranft, where he settled as a hermit in 1467. Friends and neighbours first built him a chapel and then a simple cell. In 1469 the auxiliary bishop of Constance Thomas consecrated the chapel. Because of pressure from the slope, the chapel had to be replaced and consecrated again at the end of the 17th century.

During the renovation in 1986/87 Alois Spichtig designed the simple presbytery. Inside the chapel there is an expressive panel picture cycle from 1821 on the life of Brother Klaus, created by Balz Heymann.

8 The Hermitage Cell

The cell attached to the chapel still substantially corresponds to the original in shape and materials. It was here that Niklaus spent twenty years as a hermit until his death on March 21, 1487.

His cell has two windows. One of them faces the altar towards God. The other shows outwards, open to the people. In the Ranft, Niklaus became a much sought-after adviser, mediator and peace-maker.

9 The Lower Ranft Chapel

After the death of Brother Klaus the stream of pilgrims increased. In 1501 this larger chapel was built and in 1504 – like the Upper Chapel – it was consecrated in honour of the Mother of God, Mary Magdalene, the Holy Cross and the 10 000 martyrs. The chapel is one of the most beautiful examples of late gothic architecture. The interior contains rich decorative frescoes. The paintings in the choir date back to the time of construction. The frescoes on the side walls, dating back to the beginning of the 16th century, depict scenes from the life of Brother Klaus and the Passion of Christ.

10 The Mösli Chapel

The Mösli Chapel is located on the other side of the river Melchaa, opposite the Ranft. This chapel was built in 1484 by Brother Ulrich from Memmingen and later consecrated in honour of the Saints Bartholomew, Michael and Anne. Painted panels show the life of Brother Ulrich, Brother Klaus' companion. One of the paintings shows probably one of the oldest depictions of Dorothee Wyss, Brother Klaus' wife.

Sachseln on Lake Sarnen

The idyllic village of Sachseln is situated on Lake Sarnen and is, together with Flüeli-Ranft, a popular destination for pilgrimages as well as for relaxing holidays. The geographical centre of Switzerland, the Älgi Alp, is located above the village.

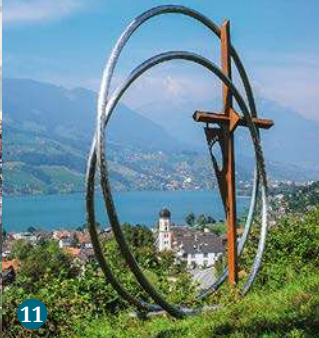

Thanks to its central location, Sachseln is the ideal starting point for excursions to the mountains of Obwalden, over the Brünig Pass to Interlaken, Lucerne and the Lake Lucerne Region.

Sachseln is the hometown of Niklaus von Flüe. His grave can be found in the baroque parish and pilgrimage church. It is an attraction for pilgrims and travellers from all over the world.

The “Museum Bruder Klaus Sachseln” is an art museum and documentation centre on Brother Klaus. The permanent exhibition “Niklaus von Flüe – Mediator between worlds” draws a varied portrait of the mystic, politician and people’s saint from the 15th century. Based on historical facts, it follows in the footsteps of Niklaus von Flüe and his wife Dorothee Wyss up to the present day.

11 “Weg der Visionen” – The Path of Visions

The meditation path “Weg der Visionen” (Path of Visions) leads from Flüeli-Ranft to Sachseln on the Bruderklausenweg (hiking trail no. 571/ Jakobsweg no. 4). Six metal sculptures created by the artist André Bucher, placed along the path, inspire contemplation.

The path begins near the house where Brother Klaus was born and ends at his grave in the parish and pilgrimage church of Sachseln.

13 Parish and Pilgrimage Church Sachseln

The parish and pilgrimage church of Sachseln is a monument of national importance. It was built after the beatification of Brother Klaus in 1649 in the early Swiss Baroque style between 1672 and 1684 and consecrated on 7 October 1684 by Auxiliary Bishop Georg Sigismund of Constance. In 1974/76 it was extensively renovated.

Since 1679, the church has housed the grave of Brother Klaus, the hermit's habit and a copy of Brother Klaus' meditation tableau, which is a true copy of the original.

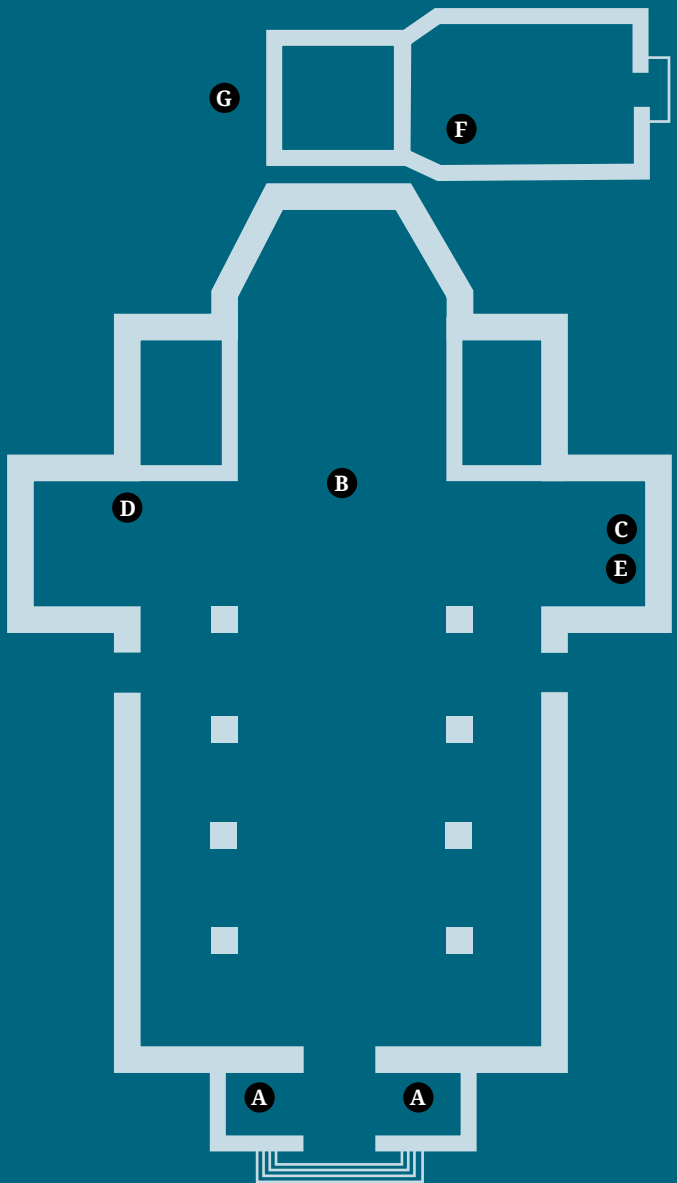

The 13th century bell tower, which stands isolated from the church, was raised in 1672 and then in 1742 and equipped with a baroque onion dome. The Grave Chapel attached to the tower has been modified several times.

14 Museum Bruder Klaus Sachseln

Niklaus von Flüe and Dorothee Wyss are the main focus of the Museum Bruder Klaus Sachseln. Audiovisuals, music and film clips as well as historical objects offer a varied insight into the life and work of these influential personalities. Since 1976 the museum has been housed in one of the most beautiful patrician houses in Obwalden, the Peter-Ignaz-von-Flüe House, opposite the church.

A Pictures at the entrance

The mosaics under the church porch were created in 1941 based on paintings by Anton Stockmann. The mosaic on the left shows the apparition of Mother Mary to Bruder Klaus in the Ranft and the one on the right features the Diet of Stans.

B Grave of Brother Klaus

Since 1934, a silver reliquary created by Meinrad Burch-Korrodi has housed the relics of the Saint. During the restoration of the church in 1974/76 the relics were placed in the main altar, created by Alois Spichtig.

C The habit of the hermit Bruder Klaus

The habit worn by Bruder Klaus on his death in 1487 has been kept in the parish church since 1610 in a display case in the right aisle. In 1975, the badly damaged habit was restored. Another habit can be found in the Jesuit Church in Lucerne.

D Tableau of meditation

Between the two side altars on the left there is a copy of Brother Klaus' meditation tableau, conforming to the original. The basic structure of the tableau is the wheel. The inner circle is connected to the outer circle by three outgoing and three incoming beams. Six medallions represent different events in the history of Salvation. The tableau was created around 1475/80 and was given to Brother Klaus in the Ranft.

E Bronze relief “Dorothee and Brother Klaus”

Alois Spichtig created the bronze relief in 1984 on the occasion of the visit of Pope John Paul II. It shows the married couple Niklaus and Dorothee united by the ray of God. When Niklaus grabs the pilgrim’s staff in 1467, Dorothee becomes the guardian of the keys.

On 14 June 1984 Pope John Paul II visited the grave of Brother Klaus and recognized in Dorothee a “saintly woman”.

F Grave Chapel

In 1487 Niklaus von Flüe was buried in the nave of the medieval church and his grave was covered with a sandstone slab with his effigy. In 1518 his relics were reburied in the same place but in a raised stone tomb. This stone tomb can be found in the Grave Chapel. The first sculpture underneath it is hardly recognizable anymore. His grave has become a religious monument and a pilgrimage destination. In 1679 the relics were transferred to the newly built church.

The gothic choir cross from the 14th century presumably originates from the old church.

G Statue of Dorothee

Dorothee Wyss presumably died around 1494/95. Her statue created by the sculptor Rolf Brem from Lucerne and donated 1991 by catholic peasant women, is located near the bell tower near the presumed grave site.
